WAIMEA CANYON

Over 10 miles long and 3,000 feet deep, the Waimea Canyon was formed by erosion and the collapse of the volcano that created Kauai.

The expansive peaks and valleys of this geological wonder is a visual treat of vibrant colors at every turn. Red soil lines the Waimea Canyon's ridges creating a spectacular photo backdrop.

The Spouting Horn Blowhole displays raw, natural power and is one of the most photographed places in Kauai. Crashing waves push the salt water through holes in the lava rock causing fantastic explosions!

Hanapepe Valley Lookout reveals panoramic views of the valley surrounded in lush greenery.

Drive though charming and histoic Koloa Town, the birthplace of sugar in Hawaii.
